

NCLEX-RN®

Exam Preparation Course

Designed for Canadian Writers

April 29-30, 2017

Overview

This intensive two-day NCLEX-RN® preparation course is designed to build confidence, review relevant content, and provide strategies to prepare candidates for the NCLEX-RN® exam. Developed specifically for Canadian nursing students and internationally educated nurses, who are preparing to write or rewrite the NCLEX-RN® exam in Canada.

Participants will benefit from the experience of University of Toronto nursing faculty, who will share their content expertise and in-depth knowledge of the NCLEX-RN® exam structure and foci, test taking strategies, and effective study strategies. The course includes focused sessions on selected areas of nursing practice covered in the NCLEX-RN® exam, including: delegation, chronic diseases, labs/diagnostics, maternal/child, paediatrics, critical care and pharmacology. Participants will have an opportunity to write and get feedback on a MOCK exam, and discuss individual learning needs with faculty.

Objectives

1. Understand how the NCLEX-RN® exam & question formats are structured.
2. Develop & apply successful test taking strategies.
3. Identify key concepts and areas for content review that are essential to successful NCLEX-RN® exam completion.
4. Develop increased confidence in exam writing.

The Centre for Professional Development at Bloomberg Faculty of Nursing at the University of Toronto is pleased to offer this program.

bit.ly/NCLEXRegistrationApril2017